In this quasi-morality play about community, love, xenophobia and revenge, religious symbolism intertwines with the randomness of the protagonist's fate.

Who is he: a wronged refugee, an outcast, a victim, a pretender, a mysterious seducer, a lover, a healer or perhaps the Messiah? Found in the foyer, he will transform the life of the Capitol Musical Theatre. His story is told through folk songs from around the world, led by the Slavic expression of the hurdy-gurdy.
