A failure occurs. Questions arise, lots of questions on the rules of this world, the significance of names, and the relationship in the space where the characters meet. On top of that, some of them can't quite speak - instead, they're better at singing.

In a land where people are condemned to immortality, who is to blame, if anyone? Playing the reasons behind failure can be both intriguing and profoundly uninteresting. But, the preparations are underway for a performance that matures with its actors. And maturing is a difficult process. Perhaps realities get a bit mixed up, and if you don't listen carefully, you might fall into the wrong hole. Challenges are worse than those in Wonderland, and there is no Alice!

This is a diploma piece by 4th-year drama students specializing in acting and singing.
